What are Cookies?

Cookies' are small text files that are stored by the browser on your computer or mobile phone. Websites are able to read and write these files, allowing them store things like personalisation details or user preferences. You can think of cookies as providing a "memory" for the website, enabling it to recognise a user and respond appropriately. Each web domain can only access cookies stored by that specific web domain, meaning that only the AdviserBook.co.uk servers can access the cookies set by the AdviserBook.co.uk domains.

It is possible that the AdviserBook websites contain elements from other web domains, in which case your browser may receive cookies from several sources.

How to control and delete cookies

AdviserBook will not use cookies to collect personally identifiable information about you. However, if you wish to restrict or block the cookies which are set by AdviserBook, or any other website, you can do this through your browser settings.

For information on how to do this on the browser of your mobile phone you will need to refer to your handset manual.

If you register with AdviserBook or if you continue to use this website, you agree to AdviserBook's use of cookies.

Other Similar Technology Used by Third Parties

Unless you have previously opted out of marketing communications from AdviserBook or third parties, tracking technology may be used in any of the emails sent to you.

These web beacons or web bugs are electronic images provided by authorised third parties known as single-pixel GIFs, which are invisible graphical images.

When you click on a link in an email, we may record this individual response to allow us to customize our offerings to you. Web beacons collect only limited information, such as the time and date of an email being opened and a URL where the web beacon resides, which will identify the email that was opened.

Web beacons can be refused when delivered via email. If you do not wish to receive Web beacons via email, you will need to disable HTML images or refuse HTML (select Text only) emails via your email software.

You may opt-out of these marketing communications altogether through the administration pages of your AdviserBook account, by clicking the opt-out links in the email itself or by contacting Customer Services at info@AdviserBook.co.uk.
